We'll be home again in mid-January 2006. It's too long ago for me to remember the details, but they really do approach high end quality. I think you'll be quite pleased with the bass response if that's your concern with the size of the bass drivers. To my ears, this speaker took the best of the classic New England sound and updated it with greater accuracy and punch. One of the best speakers that Boston Acoustics ever made. If the driver has a foam tear, Boston Acoustics maintains an inventory of replacement drivers. Boston's website does have product info on their discontinued products. IMO, Boston really lost its way when they introduced discontinued the acoustic suspension A and T series speakers in favor of the ported CR and Lynnfield series speakers, which not only got rid of the acoustic suspension design in favor of a ported cabinet, but traded out their very nice soft dome tweeters for a horrible metal dome tweeter design. The T1000 was an excellent speaker in its own right, but the T1030 took it to a new level with a completely upgraded crossover, improved drivers with a more accurate frequency response and a change to the driver layout that not only sounds better but also has superior imaging. These speakers work perfectly and sound spectacular! Barely a single scratch anywhere to be found, and just a couple of edge breaks the size of a grain of rice. Something went wrong.
